CHILDREN LEARN, GIVE . . . Mrs. Sally Roberts' kindergartners at Newton Elementary School didn't come empty-handed when they made a field trip to the Torrance Fire Station last week. They also brought their offerings to the firefighters' "Toys for Tots" campaign. Bringing in their gifts and getting ready to learn about fire engines are Pamy Barton and Brad Baker, as Engineer Harlan Whitacre talks to them.

tion for the 1953 painting after viewing the art work while studying in Italy. "I knew I'd some day reproduce this beautiful picture," she says.
In 1954 a new technique was utilized for Madonna Row. From a twelfth century Psalter, a book devoted to the Psalms, the mosaic "Madonna and Child" was done. Like the five oils which preceded it, the mosaic was framed in gold.
"REST ON THE Flight to Egypt" by Lorenzo Lollo was the theme of the sixth oil in 1955.
In 1956 what is generally accepted as the most outstanding of the art pieces appeared in the form of a stained glass window, completed by Miss Walker and a former student, Joseph Gadden, now a member of the college art faculty.
The "Madonna of Chartres" is valued at $7000. The original still sheds jeweled light into the Chartres Cathedral in France. The window is so old that its origin has been lost.
ANDREA DEL Sarto's "Madonna of the Harpies" from the Uffizi gallery of Florence was added to the college collection in 1957.
Last year the Venetian glass was used in the preparation of the second mosaic to make its appearance on the row. It is patterned after a Byzantine mosaic which is now in the church of St. Theodore in Daphne, Greece.
A portion of the original has been stuccoed over to patch the deterioration of the ages. Even the patch was copied in the college reproduction.

182 Arrested

Huge Dope Cache Found in Garage

One of the largest hauls of the arrest of 182 suspected dope peddlers during the week end, officers said.

Officers reported confiscating 385 pounds of marijuana, enough to make nearly 200,000 cigarettes. The market value of the leaf was placed at about $90,000.

The narcotic, compressed into bricks weighing one kilogram each, had been hidden in door panels and spare tires of three autos.

Officers said the dope was found in the garage of Edmund Barnett, 32, at 21115 Bolsa Ave., north of Carson St. and east of Main St. Barnett was identified as a tree surgeon.

Barnett and an alleged confederate, Eugene Valencia, 30, of Los Angeles, were among more than 100 persons indicted secretly by the County Grand Jury last week.

A roundup touched off by the indictments and the narcotics discovery here led to

MEMBERS OF COMPETING CLASSES congratulate Michaele Ann Scholes, director of the winning Senior class at Marymount Palos Verdes. The occasion was the staging of Marymount's Sixth Annual Song Festival last Sunday afternoon on campus. The Senior's "Harvest Hoedown" production done to Rogers and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma" brought plaudits from the overflow crowds and winning votes from the six judges. Miss Scholes is displaying the winner's trophy. Admiring it are (from left) Carol Kelly, freshman song director; Juanita Watson, junior song director; and Suzanne Lundeen, sophomore song director, all of Torrance.
